

Voluntary Recall of Mrs. Baird's 4" Buns Due to Undeclared Milk

Fort Worth, Texas - The U.S. Food and Drug Administration has announced a recall of Mrs. Baird's brand four-inch buns due to a labeling error. Mrs Baird's Bakeries has voluntarily recalled the buns because the products contains milk that is not listed on the label. Individuals with allergies to milk run the risk of a serious or life threatening reaction if they consume this product. Luckily, no illness or allergic reactions have been reported and no other products are involved in this voluntary recall ...

The buns were sold at Costco stores in North Texas in a two count package containing 24 buns and to restaurant and institutional customers in Texas and Oklahoma in 12 count packages. The package label reads:

Mrs Baird's
Enriched
12 Buns
NET WT 21 OZ (1LB 5 OZ) 595g
Best by date of April 8, 2008.

The problem was discovered during routine operations at the plant by an employee monitoring the use of packaging.

Consumers can return the product to their place of purchase for a full refund or exchange. Consumers with questions may contact Mrs Baird's at (877) 224-7374. Thanks to Kids with Food Allergies for keeping us current on Food Allergy Recall Alerts!
