

Tampico Citrus Punch Recalled in California Due to Undeclared Milk

Fresno, CA – A Central Valley dairy has recalled nearly 2,500 gallons of Tampico Citrus Punch because the product could contain a small amount of milk. Producer Dairy Foods says people who are allergic or sensitive to milk risk serious or life-threatening allergic reactions if they consume the product. However, there have been no reports of illnesses. The affected batch of one-gallon containers have a September 17th expiration date and the Fresno plant number 06-4199 on the lower left corner of the label. The bottles were distributed to retailers in parts of Central and Northern California.
