

Win Organic, Vegan, Allergy-Friendly Cookies from HomeFree Treats!

This week on Go Dairy Free and One Frugal Foodie we are giving away a sampler package of Organic Cookies from HomeFree Treats. Formerly known as Gak's Snacks, HomeFree produces cookies and coffee cakes that are made from organic ingredients in a facility that is certified vegan and dedicated nut-free, peanut-free, dairy-free, and egg-free. But most importantly, their sweets taste awesome (trust me, several of us at Go Dairy Free have tried and loved every flavor; just ask Sarah and Sarena)! No one will feel "left out" when they bite into one of HomeFree's big, soft cookies or reach for a handful of their cookie minis. Okay, I'm getting hungry, let's get back to the giveaway ...

Want to enter to win?! Leave a comment on the giveaway post on One Frugal Foodie, and let us know what flavor of cookie you think HomeFree should come out with next ... or ... just tell me why you want to win these cookies!

About HomeFree Treats

Founded by Jill Robbins, a clinical psychologist and author of "Allergen Free Baking," she turned to baking when her son was diagnosed with severe food allergies. Jill's goal was to create delicious, wholesome treats that her son, and everyone with or without food allergies, can enjoy together. Today the company makes a variety of cookies and coffee cakes in a dedicated baking facility, where it conducts allergen testing on ingredients and random product batches to ensure that each product is free of common food allergens.

HomeFree products are:

- Fine for most people allergic to wheat (not gluten-free; contain oats)
- Fine for most people allergic to soy (most contain soy lecithin)
